Notes: Once the parliament convened after the 1996 elections, there were nine parliamentary factions including two separate parliamentary factions for the CDR. I have combined the subsidy for these parties into a single CDR total. In addition while the ethnic minority parties are listed as a separate faction, it was unclear whether they received a base, and therefore, they have been excluded from this analysis. The calculation of these sums was based on government decision 756 published in Monitorul Oficial al României (1996a). For any questions regarding the methodology of this calculation, please contact the author. These data were computed by the author based on budget revenues reported by the IMF. See Romania: Selected Issues and Statistical Appendix (2001).

*The 1996 law provides that no party may receive five times the base subsidy in any year. Therefore the PDSR was the only party that exceeded this amount (in every year) and had a lower adjusted. In 1997, the pre-adjusted amount $571,579.27, in 1998 the amount was $461,506.47, in 1999 the amount was $517,522.04 and in 2000, the amount was $585,230.44.

* The Social Democratic Pole of Romania (PSD) includes the Party of Social Democracy in Romania, the Romanian Social Democratic Party and the Humanist Party of Romania.

**The 1996 law provides that no party may receive five times the base subsidy in any year. The PDSR was the only party that exceeded this amount and had a lower adjusted subsidy. In 2001, PSD should have received $708,637.80.
